Back Came Her Strength
Than Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription No. 777—Guaranteed.

Cincinnati, O., July 26, 1922.—After having been relieved of kidney troubles for several years, standing by Dr. Carey's Marshroot prescription No. 777, an exceedingly grateful and loyal patient, I am compelled to state that several fellow workers who were also benefited beyond their belief by its use, it is my candid opinion that there is no other remedy than Dr. Carey's Marshroot.

August 21 I received your letter asking permission to reproduce my letter to you (as above). It will in any way help people to realize the true value of Dr. Carey's Marshroot prescription. You are at liberty to do so. I know that it cured me. I suffered great pain for several years and am certainly grateful and feel confident that if people who have kidney trouble will use it long enough to give it a fair trial there will be more grateful ones added to the list.—John B. Douglas, 183 W. Court St. Cincinnati, O.

Important.—Marshroot Prescription No. 777 is Dr. Daniel A. Carey's own formula. It is not a patent medicine and is not sold through drug stores to accommodate the dealer. You can always get this effective prescription at Connelville Drug Co., 605 E. Main, and reliable pharmacist in the country over.—Advertisement.

MAKE PAPER FROM GRASS
Mill Near Baltimore to Begin Manufacture Under New Process.

In a mill near Baltimore there will be manufactured the first newspaper ever made out of sawgrass. This grass grows in Florida, and the newspaper run of the Maryland mill will be used for samples by the Grass Fiber Pulp and Paper corporation of Florida. This concern, capitalized at $1,000,000, controls acres of Florida sawgrass and operates a pulp mill. In addition to the newspaper, the Baltimore mill will transform other pulp from the Florida mill into various grades of kraft wrapper.

Gilbert D. Leach, assistant secretary and treasurer of the Florida company, will supervise the operations at the Maryland mill.

OILS ARE CURE FOR LEPROSY
Sir Leonard Rogers Says Injection of Certain Oils is Effective.

That leprosy can be effectively cured by the injection of certain oils, including cod liver and soybean oil, was claimed by Sir Leonard Rogers in a paper read before a recent meeting of the Royal Society of Arts in London.

Sir Leonard declared that experiments made in various parts of the world led physicians to the belief that the disease could be cured within the space of a few years.

There would appear to be numerous cases of leprosy in London, particularly among army men who have returned from eastern countries, which are unrecognized.

FINDS 10,000-YEAR-OLD AX
Man Uses It for Months to Scrape Soil Off Shoes.

London.—A curious story has behind the finding of a neolithic ax head in the parish church yard at Galsbury, Yorkshire. It was dug up by the gravedigger, T. M. Thompson, who has been using it for months to scrape the soil from his boots, not being aware of its archaeological value.

"It is a wonder I did not throw it back into the grave when I filled up the hole," he said recently.

Wonderful Results from Lydia
E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"Belot, Wis.—My female trouble was right on by overwork. I had worked very hard in stores and had to do heavier work than my strength could stand, and had to be on my feet most of the time. Finally I had to give up this work entirely and stay at home. Doctor's medicine did not give me much relief, and my mother wanted me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took a couple of boxes and I thought I did not hope for anything else. Nothing I took helped much, so I finally decided to give the notable Compound another trial and take enough of it to make sure could help me. I have taken it over now and it has brought wonderful results. I have gained from 35 to pounds and am keeping better now.
I found all the change in my life. I will be glad to answer all seasonable garment. It is worn with

Pack Your Furs With Care for the Summer

Hang the furs out in the sun for several days, then give them a good beating and shaking up to be sure that no moths are in them. Brush with Bell some flaxseed, then dip a cloth in the solution and wipe the furs with this lightly. This will make the furs look nearly as bright as new. Wrap a lump of camphor in a cloth and place it with the furs. Wrap the furs in a newspaper that is without holes or breaks, or in paper bag. Paste the edges together securely, or the furs may be packed loosely in a box. Paste a strong strip of paper over the cracks left between the box and its cover. If there are no moths in the furs when placed in the box they will be safe without camphor or tobacco. Another very good way is to put the furs in a strong paper sack the sack securely at the top and store in a dark place.

To dry clean any kind of furs, first wash some clean brush carefully in a pan, stirring occasionally with the hand so that it will not burn; rub the warm brush into the fur for some time, then shake and brush until free from the brush. You can do the work better if all linings and stiffenings are removed and the article is spread out flat on a board or table.

Moths will not stay where there are cloves, so put some cloves in the bottom of trunks and wardrobes in the folds of blankets and other woolen articles, in the pockets of coats, and in other places where moths are likely to lodge. The cloves are agreeable in odor and can be easily shaken out.

A pleasant perfume as well as preventive against moths can be made as follows: Take one ounce each of cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg, mace, cinnamon and Tangelin leaves. Add as much olive oil as will equal the other ingredients all put together. Grind all well to a powder and then put in little bags and place the bags among your clothes in drawers, trunks, boxes and other places.

Things Women Should Know About Hosiery

Mock seams and a mock fit that will not suit the first laundering cannot deceive the woman who is wise in the ways of hosiery buying.

It is the cloudy thickened ink that betrays the stocking that would masquerade as something it is not. A stocking to keep its fit must be seamless fitted in the knitting or it must have a genuine seam down the back.
In either case the threads will converge toward the back and the texture of the knitting will be the same at the ankle as it is just below the heel.

A stocking that is shaped after the weaving has the fabric crowded together at the ankle. This makes it thicker and darker. Also the threads run perfectly straight with no convergence. It is a simple matter for the woman buying hosiery to lay the ankle against the top of the stocking to compare the texture and at the same time examine the threads to see whether they run straight or converge. The woman who learns to do this insures herself against shoddy hosiery.

Sleeves Are Long, but Ornamentation Varies

For two seasons now fashion has planned her faith—and with good reason—to the treatment of sleeves. Resisting with models of excessive width they have ranged through various stages of boldness to the close fitted sleeves that are a feature of some of the newest gowns. Almost without exception, sleeves are long, but that is the only thing on which they agree.
Some show puffs above the elbow or at the wrist, others have ruffles over an extremely tight wrist band or gathered cuffs in flippant style, and yet others are slashed at elbow and elbow or leg a million. Generally speaking they're highly ornamental showing clever trimmings and embroidery.

States Coal Commission has announced the appointment of an advisory committee of eminent engineers consisting of S. A. Taylor of Pittsburgh, R. V.
Norris of Wilkes-Barre, H. M. Chance of Philadelphia, J. H. Allport of Harnessedore, Pa., and James R. Flay of New York.

The committee will supervise the work of the commission's engineering staff in making a valuation of coal properties including those in opera-

The committee which is assisting the commission is a voluntary capacity will hold meetings with the commis-

Communists Overpower Police, Hoist Red Flag in City of Gelsenkirchen

Police Headquarters Taken After Battle in Which Several Are Killed.

RUN ON FOOD STORES

By Associated Press.

ESSEN, May 24.—The Communists have taken possession of police headquarters at Gelsenkirchen and have hoisted the red flag over the building. Reports from German sources say that five persons were killed and 61 wounded in the fighting for the possession of the building. The struggle began late last night and continued until this morning. The building is said to have been defended by the civilian defense organization which was forced to quit when one wing was set on fire. The fighting was not restricted to the building but spread to the streets.

The trouble began to take serious form when a Communist commission of control visited the shops, demanding that the prices of foodstuffs be cut in half. The housewives of the city, hearing that the stores were complying with the demand, swooped down on them with market baskets and exhausted the supplies.

Meanwhile the streets began to fill with people and a general scramble ensued. As the security police had been expelled in February the town was without protection except for firemen and the defense league. The intervention of the firemen and the league seemed to add fuel to the fire and the crowd began counter attacking. Seeing matters were growing worse the firemen began using revolvers this resulting in several being killed and many others wounded. At least 40 wounded are reported to have been treated in the hospital.

Additional French troops were ordered into Gelsenkirchen which is in the Essen region six miles from Bochum but it was announced there was no intention to interfere so long as the demonstrators did not clash with the French military. When the French troops appeared they were cheered by the Germans who thought the military had come to suppress the demonstration but the French merely went to their various posts and looked on.

the trustees and the efficient library staff. Its members will come to use the institution to a greater degree and that others will follow their example.

Concluding his address, Mr. Connell read the following letter from Mr. Ruth, now at his home in Washington, D. C., which had been addressed to John J. Brady, secretary of the club:

Owing to Mrs. Ruth's serious illness it is impossible for me to attend the dinner to be given in honor of the trustees of the Carnegie Free Library and the Library Staff Wednesday evening, May twenty-third.

I regret my inability to be present on this occasion as it would have been an opportunity for expressing my pleasure at the successful consummation of the ideas and plans of the Kiwanis Club for a permanent home.

The fine spirit of cooperation between the Kiwanis and the Library Trustees Committee has made this work very interesting and a mutual pleasure, and the results obtained, I hope, will prove an inspiration for further civic effort, all of which work to the credit and benefit of the community.

With best wishes for the Kiwanis Club in its new home and hoping you will have an enjoyable evening, I remain, Sincerely yours,

L. P. RUTH.

After dinner the floor was cleared of tables and dancing was indulged for several hours by many of the guests; others played card games or watched the dancing.

Union is Determined to Nationalize Coal Mines

The next great fight of the United Mine Workers of America will be to nationalize the mines, according to John J. Cornwell, general counsel of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, and former Governor of West Virginia, speaking before the convention of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"Whether the miners' organization will make an issue, at the expiration of the present contract, of the six-hour day and five-day week, remains to be seen," Governor Cornwell said. He added:

"There is one fact of which I do feel certain, however, and to my mind it is just as sure as anything in the future can be, and that is the sooner or later, and I do not think very far off, the miners' organization will make an issue of the nationalization of the coal mines and fight it out with a strike on that line."

"This statement is made in all seriousness by a man who thinks he knows something of the psychology of the situation, and who has talked for hours with district officers and subordinate officials of the mine workers' organization."

"That demand was first formally and officially made at their national convention at Cleveland in 1913. It has since been reiterated, but for tactical and strategic purposes John L. Lewis has not permitted it to be pushed, but do not mistake the fact that it is the basic demand of the United Mine Workers' organization, and the officers are intent upon pressing it at the present moment. There is a last now, while the present contract is in force, the government Fact-Finding Commission makes its investigation, but if that commission's report is not satisfactory to them, and it will not be satisfactory unless it flatly advocates nationalization of the mines, then the storm will break again and the agitation begin."

"The irrepressible conflict between the union and the non-union fields will go on, and the free-speechers, incensed by strikes and disruptions in this city, will go on agitating and getting out their propaganda. When the non-union coal fields capitulate, if they ever do, the work of the miners' organization in securing complete control of the production of coal will have been attained. That would make the struggle for nationalization of the mines much easier."

"No sure am I that that struggle is not far off. I am wondering how it will be met, and dealt with. Have this country and our people the temperament and the disposition to make such a fight as the English people have made or would make? Or will the members of Congress hasten to rush through a bill nationalizing the mines while Mr. Lewis sits in the gallery with a stop-watch and counts off the remaining minutes, as was done when the Adamson law was passed?"

NEW STEEL BUYING LIMITED IN VOLUME; DELIVERIES HEAVY

Prices Unchanged and Well Established; Delivery Premiums Have Disappeared; Consumption Heavy.

SPECIAL TO THE WEEKLY COURIER.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Report will review the steel and iron trade tomorrow as follows:

Now buying in steel continues at very limited volume, both as to early deliveries and as to late deliveries. Buyers find themselves well covered, on account of the heavy deliveries. The steel industry is operating at a considerably better rate than was expected, by either sellers or buyers, would obtain at this time. Tonnage is being produced at about 50,000,000 tons a year. This is well above the highest rate ever before reached, and the output in the present half year will probably exceed the largest tonnage ever before made in any six consecutive months. At the same time exports are relatively light.

There are a few cancellations and postponements in steel shipments. These arise not from requirements being less than expected but from supplies being greater. At no time in the last three months of this year was it a secret that many buyers of steel were endeavoring to overbuy.

Basic prices for steel products for late delivery, are unchanged, and are well established. Delivery premiums have now practically disappeared, except on a few special lines, such as galvanized sheets. The mills are able to make early deliveries have been gradually reducing their making prices to the regular basis.

Consumption of steel promises to be heavy for months, and perhaps to the end of the year. Only the oil trade has smaller requirements than was expected. Steel production, being very heavy, may be in excess of the consumption, and if so the production will eventually have to be reduced.

The steel industry is not particularly disturbed by the wave of conversion sentiment that has swept over the country, as it recognizes that the steel consuming industries are well fitted with business. The present quietness in the steel market is due not to sentiment but to the heavy production and shipments of steel, relieving consumers of all anxiety as to their supplies in future.

First Steel Produced in U. S. The first steel produced in the United States, according to the Geological Survey, was probably made in 1728, by Samuel Hilday and Joseph Downey in Connecticut.

W. W. Mining Institute. The West Virginia Coal Mining Institute will hold its semi-annual meeting at the Wabash, Clarksburg, on June 12 and 13.

TAILS AND THEIR FUNCTIONS

Different Reasons for Different Movements, According to Eminent Italian Professor.

Animals' tails have various functions, Prof. Giuseppe Biondo tells us in a published study of their uses. The tail of a dog, says the professor, is, as we all know, an index of his psychological state; he raises and wags it, under the impression of joy, lowers it when afflicted and trails it between his legs when frightened. Why, then, may we not believe that dogs have a caudal language, and that the various movements of the tail form a method of communication between them?

The professor points out that among cattle and beasts of burden the tail is a weapon of defense against insects which, in the undomesticated state of those animals, may often have meant the saving of their lives. He says that in the early struggle for existence in outlandish and barren land the question of survival of the fittest was purely a matter of which had the strongest tail. This resulted in the development of the muscles of the cow and horse to a remarkable degree.

When a horse is struck on the back with a whip it switches the spot with its tail. The horse knows it is a whip and not an insect, but the reflex muscles of its tail are so highly developed that it instinctively switches before the horse has time to telegraph to his brain and put in a stop order.

A cow flicks its tail to keep up a perpetual side to side motion of its tail than to indulge in the nervous, energetic and which the horse upon occasion employs.

SHOW GREAT INTEREST IN MAN

Lower Animals Believed to Look Upon Human Biped as Very Much One of Themselves.

That animals look upon man as one of themselves, and not as an object entirely beyond their horizon, is evidenced by the remarkable interest and curiosity regarding him and his doings shown by wild creatures, and by their desire to make friends with him as long as their confidence has not been met by rough rebuke and persecution, which is, almost the usual response given by the destroyer of reason to such friendly advances.

It is our own fault only, if birds all the world over are not even now on the same footing of familiarity with us as were the birds of the Monte Alverna when St. Francis of Assisi arrived there; or the birds of the Falklands and the Galapagos Islands when Darwin visited them; or the birds of southern Morocco are at the present day, or were, at least, under Mohammedan rule, a few years ago.

But even birds, which have learned at their cost that to come within reach of man is an infinitely greater risk than to approach a wildcat or a snake, will still, when they believe their selves unobserved, and while taking all necessary precautions, often give way to the feeling of curiosity with which the appearance of the long-lipped in unexpected localities and on unexpected occasions inspires them. Hans Couderhove in the Atlantic Monthly.

Pastorals.

Pastoral literature must not be confused with that which has for its subject the lives, the ideas and the emotions of simple and unsophisticated mankind, far from the centers of our complex civilization. The two may be in their origin related, and they occasionally, as it were, stretch out feelers towards one another, but the pastoral or tradition lies in its essence as far from the human document of humble life as from a volume of pastoral theology. Thus the shepherds of pastoral are primarily and distinctively shepherds; they are not more widely engaged in shepherding as one out of many of the employments of mankind. As soon as the natural shepherd-life has found an objective setting in conscious artistic literature, it was felt that there was, after all, a difference between herding turkeys and pasturing sheep; that the one was capable of a particular literary treatment which the other was not.—W. W. Greg.

The Proper Thing.

A man went into a bakery the other day. "I'm getting married next week," he began, "and I want to buy a wedding cake." "I suppose you know, sir," said the shopgirl, "that it's the latest thing to choose wedding cakes which harmonize with one's business or profession. For instance, an attorney would have a rat cake, a musician an oat cake, a man who goes for his friends a sponge cake, a pianist a pound cake, and so on. What, may I ask, is your calling?" "I am a doctor," the bridegroom answered. "In that case, then," said the girl, smiling, "we would, of course, prescribe an angel cake."

Make the Children a Scrap-Book.

Start a historical scrap-book for the children. Put into it pictures and items of unusual interest dealing with important public characters and events. When they grow older allow the children to do their own selection of articles and their own pasting. If encouraged in this work they will complete the book when they are grown up, and will have not only a book of much interest and information, but will have a liking for history (history which will be real and concrete to them), not developed so easily by any other method.

Fog Adds to Beauty.

In olden times the fine ladies living in the Maine coast towns used to acquire beautiful complexions by sleeping with their heads out of the window in foggy weather.

ruined

Many a first impression, socially or in business, has been ruined by some seemingly little thing.

IT'S so easy to get off on the wrong foot with people—whether it be in an important business contact or simply in a casual social meeting.

It pays in life to be able to make people like you. And so often it is some seemingly very little thing that may hold you back.

Notice today, for example, how you unconsciously watch a person's teeth when he or she is in conversation with you. If they are unclean, improperly kept, and if you are a fastidious person, you will automatically hold this against them. And all the while this same analysis is being made of you.

What do your teeth say about you today? Only the right dentifrice—consistently used—will protect you against such criticism. Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. The first tube you buy (25 cents) or the free sample (see coupon) will prove this to you.

You will notice the improvement even in the first few days. And, moreover, just as Listerine is the safe antiseptic, so Listerine Tooth Paste is the safe dentifrice. It cleans yet it cannot injure the enamel.

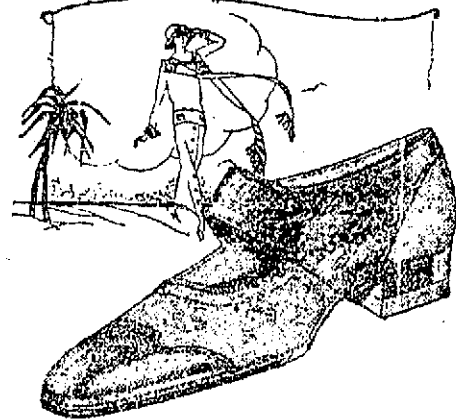

What are your teeth saying about you today?

MOVING THE NATION'S COMMERCE

ENEMIES of the railroad have asserted that they are decrepit, broken down and unable to function adequately. Nothing could be more untrue.

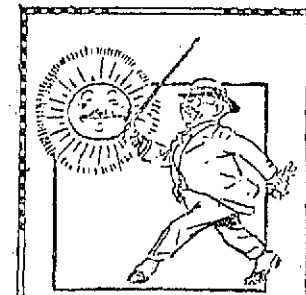

The railroads of the United States constitute an unrivaled monument to American genius. They are immeasurably the most, the best equipped and most efficiently operated in the world. They are the greatest moving body the greatest volume of traffic in their history.

But the need for greater expansion, transportation facilities to care for the constantly expanding commerce of the nation, is urgent and immediate. American railroads recognize that need and have organized to meet it.

On the part of the Pennsylvania Railroad System it involves the expenditure in 1923 of approximately $100,000,000 for new facilities—improvements and additions—including the sum of $52,000,000 for new engines and cars alone.

This vast expenditure was decided upon in the face of the present high cost of material and operation because the Pennsylvania Railroad System—in performing a national service—is confident of the co-operation and support of the American people.

THAT was years ago when he packed a terrible grudge, a mighty irritable stomach and a liver that refused to do the things that all good livers should. No wonder his friends called him an "old pill" and stayed away.

But that was years ago—long before he discovered Beecham's Pills and learned that two or bed-time can bring sunshine into a man's life. Today, he's an optimist, a hero to his wife, and a staunch believer in Beecham's Pills.

GOOD HOG HOUSE A PROFIT-MAKER

Cleanliness, Warmth and Sunlight Are Important Essentials.

HAS ALL MODERN EQUIPMENT

Interior So Arranged as to Make Disinfecting Easy—Wall Construction is of Hollow Cement Blocks or Hollow Tile.

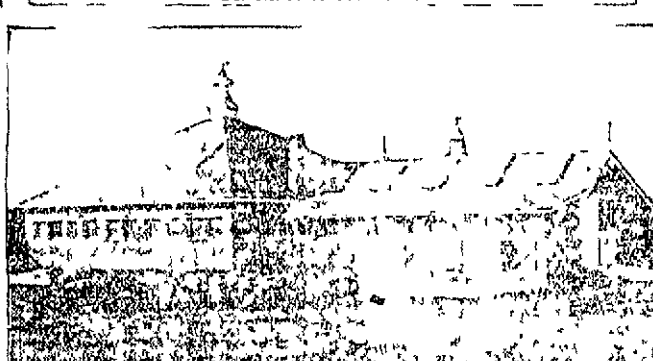

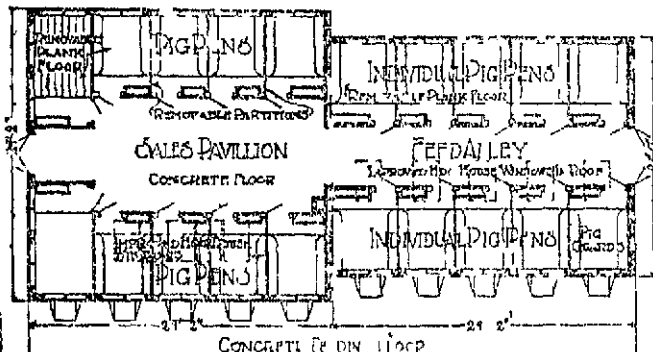

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is without doubt, the highest authority on these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, 1227 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

While this hog house has been designed to give a sales pavilion space in its wider portion it must not be supposed that a picture of this type is for the breeder of pedigree hogs only. On the contrary, it would be an investment that pays big for anyone who is raising hogs. Naturally, it is assumed that the hogs will not be scrub, but of some recognized breed that responds to favorable surroundings and feeding.

The wall construction is of hollow cement block or hollow tile. The under side of the rafters ought to be lined with matched lumber to give an additional dead-air space, like that of the walls. Note that the ceiling is reasonably high and is in ventilation, and that the floor is cement, covered in turn with removable plank flooring.

The location should be chosen with two things in mind. The first would be to allow ample light for a well drained yard; and the second to place the building so that the sloping roof windows would cover sunlight to the farthest pen in winter, and again so as to give the most shade in summer.

As shown the hog house is 35 feet 4 inches by 20 feet 2 inches, and has 18 pens. There are two extra pens at the far end of the wider portion of the structure. These would come in useful at rutting periods, at farrowing time and when new hogs are purchased. It is not always the best plan to turn strange hogs in immediately, but to keep them in until at least two or three weeks after their arrival.

By its very nature a hog house of this description should be warm enough for the animals through even a severe winter. However, inasmuch as there is ample space for a fan cooler, it also would help greatly in maintaining warmth and besides would aid in air circulation and in keeping the air dry. Ordinarily, necessary ventilation could be obtained from the open doors and windows and the fans in the winter.

The frame is made of heavy timbers, and the interior is finished with a material that is easy to clean and that is resistant to the action of blooded stock being inspected by prospective purchasers.

The sales pavilion would be very capable, not only for the use of the whole family, but for turning the pigs in in inclement weather for exercise and to enable the pens to be cleaned.

One feature of construction of this kind—concrete floor with a removable plank floor superimposed—a dirt clean job or dusting is easily accomplished, and there is no place where dirt can gather and breed disease. There, too, the whole arrangement is such as to make disinfecting easy. No matter how healthy your pigs are, once a year the hog house ought to get a thorough disinfecting.

It must be too obvious, any one who has an outdoor pig lot, that a hog house built in a clean, dry place, with a concrete floor, is a great help.

Otherwise the hog house is a fair way toward being a dirty, and it is not a matter of dirt, but of rheumatism, bronchitis, pneumonia and so on—very common on white truffles in swine that are not allowed to keep themselves clean. We all know that dirt is the best place for bacteria to grow, and that is why it is so important to keep the house clean in the living quarters.

For more information on this subject, write to the author, William A. Radford, 1227 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

ARCTIC SPOT NEVER FROZEN

Waters of the Gulf Stream Prevent Formation of Ice on the Murman Coast

When it is realized that the Murman coast is on the Arctic ocean, one naturally pictures a frozen waste with even a solid sea in winter. But the long arm of the Gulf stream stretched across the Atlantic, around the northern tip of Europe and along the coast just beyond, makes the Arctic waters which bathe the northern end of Norway and the nearby strip of Russia more truly Atlantic waters, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. This is an open coast the year round while Arctic waters to the east and the gulf of the Baltic far to the south are frozen solidly for many months.

Foreign fishermen have been making the most of this region of ice-free waters, where, in the pre-war season, schools of cod, herring and salmon abound. Chiefly the fisheries are those of British and Norwegian vessels who have maintained that they have the right to fish on this coast, out side the territorial limit.

The Russian fishermen of the Murman coast are a hardy lot, who live along the coast in the spring, and summer and desert the country in winter.

The Murman coast was practically unknown to the outside world until the blockade of the Baltic and Black seas during the World war made necessary dependence on the nearest possible doorway to the north. An area of 100,000 laborers was set to work building a railroad from Leningrad to the coast of Murman, where in an inlet 90 miles from the open sea, the wide deep harbor free from both currents and the largest ocean freighters could find refuge from the grip of ice. The railroad was built in a hurry, and the winter was so cold that only a little while before the Russian revolution came to make it useless.

Blueberries are in high thick. According to a bulletin of the United States Department of Agriculture, a blueberry in the field is now in its prime.

Trimmings Hold Sway on Frocks

Embroidery in Odd Corners or Often Placed in Conspicuous Places.

One view of the spring frocks gives the impression that there is no devoted change in silhouette. Upon further examination, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, the intricacies of detail add trimming to stand out. A frock may be as plain as a pipe stem to all outward appearance when in reality it is a combination of ideas so cleverly put together that they create a thing of great beauty.

Many of the frocks are cut on the simplest of all possible patterns—in essence the one-piece dress. Then they adopt some sort of original trimming. It is hard to say what is the favorite trimming. Embroidery in the spring openings, has held the foremost place, but it is not put on in any stereotyped manner. It is tucked into odd corners or made to flame out in conspicuous places, and sometimes it goes so far as to cover a whole gown or coat, but it is best when done by hand with all that attention to stitchery which the feminine mind loves so well and which cannot help but make a costume the more beautiful.

On coats both long and short, there is much embroidery and it is not always of the sort that covers a garment. Indeed, the wide cuffs and the collar often will be covered with embroidery and the rest of the coat left plain. Again, there are unadorned lines on the coat, except the sleeves, and they will be resplendent with embroidery in the most vivid of colorings.

This idea extends itself to dresses, where the sleeves are often the sole trimming, done in the most stunning of embroidered patterns. One of these is made of shiny black satin with the reverse of cut, the bodice and the little sleeves cut to fit snugly. There are added puffed and full sleeves of white chiffon in two layers, to which have been added embroidery in an applique manner, some pieces of brightly colored silk with some long, effective stitches of gorgeous silk threads added to complete the embroidered effect. The patterns are large and sprawling, and against the background of black, created by the severe folds of the dress, they show to their utmost a trimming which it would be hard to equal for artistic effect and smartness.

Belts and Waistcoats.

For three-piece suits there are embroidered belts and embroidered waistcoats. One lovely blouse was made of dark blue silk crepe with a whole front composed of a panel of Chinese embroidery, straight from a Chinatown shop. This, when the jacket was left open showed its colorful stripes with the best effect, and when the jacket was removed altogether it became an effective ornament for the blouse as a part of what appeared to be a complete and well-thought-out dress.

Embroideries of all countries are fashionable and the Egyptian is not more popular than the Indian or the Belgian or the Chinese, for that matter. Each one takes its place. Blouses are covered with embroidery and with all other sorts of trimming. Some of the latter will be to wear with tailored skirts or suits are made from what seems to be two squares of silk, put together with rows of double hemstitching ending wide hems. There may be a monogram somewhere on the front of the blouse to give it a touch of distinction and to add a touch of individuality.

A long-waisted blouse designed as a possible part of a three-piece suit had medallions or silver embroidery worked at irregular intervals over its bright green surface. Then the sleeves, which were short, had edgings of that same silver embroidery and facings of deep purple silk just to add another contrast of color. This, after all, merely was a suggestion, for the purple tone showed only at the most intervals.

Blouses are the most used of all trimmings, for there is hardly a gown of the present season that does not show a bit of ribbon somewhere. That ribbon may be only a flaring bow or less observed or a series of loops and bows, but at any rate it cannot be denied that ribbon is an important factor in the making of all sorts and conditions of spring and summer frocks, whether it is to be tucked or restrained.

Even the tailored suits are showing edgings of ribbon, and some of the top coats have ribbon to form a collar and to tie them together, serving in the place of the buttons which one might expect.

Little Dresses Are Attractive.

In one instance a series of narrow cream lace flutings has been used to make the trimming of the neck and sleeves of a tulle gown, giving it an appearance of the greatest charm and tying it up with the best of the modern fashions. The same sort of ruffled lace has been applied to the hat in ruffles that cover the ears.

The well-known "little" dresses are the ones which come out spectacularly with the use of ribbon as trimming.

They may have nothing more than a binding of ribbon about the necking and the sleeves, but that is always of a color in contrast to the one used for the gown. The effect of one shade against the other serves to provide the distinctive note that carries the gown past all criticism into the realm of smartness.

Loops of ribbon have been added to straight-line gowns in row after row, providing a bit of trimmed effect that, after all, being of the same color as the gown itself, serves only to create a little variety in the quality and tone of the costume. Not only dresses but coats have been handled in this manner. On one of the little short coats a series of ribbon loops forms the rolling collar, becoming as a frame for the face. More of the loops are applied as flaring cuffs for the tightly-fitted sleeves, and to the lower edges of the short jacket hanches of the same ribbon have been applied at the spots where pockets ought to be. As a matter of fact, tiny pockets are hidden underneath the flat two rows of ribbon loops, but they serve only as an excuse for repetition of the ribbon trimming. Long ribbon ends have been used to tie the coat together under the chin and to fly away almost to the bottom of the coat.

The severest sort of tailored coats are surprisingly tied together at the waist-line with large bows of ribbon and long trailing ends that form the only trimming for the wrap. Then there are ribbon facings which appear only on the under side of the little jackets and longer coats.

Ribbons for sashes are obvious enough, but in the way that they are used this season they seem to take on a new expression and meaning.

Sash Bows Are Used.

There are sash bows at the sides of costumes, there are those which appear directly in front and then there are those, wide and spreading, posed directly in the middle of the back only to dip long ends which in many cases serve to cover the surface of the skirt. These are used with dresses of all sorts so long as they are meant for dress or semi-dress occasions where the fastidious of ribbon sashes would not be considered out of place.

Feelings of color have been used with effects of untold beauty. There will be seen a gown which is altogether somber upon its first appearance but with feelings of the most brilliant hue that show only when the wearer moves about or poses at this angle or that. They are made of soft silks and of chiffon and are applied to gowns meant for formal occasions as well as to those meant only for the strictest sort of street wear. Panels on skirts are faced with color. Necklines and the wide endings of sleeves show brilliant touches of facing. Wide, draped belts will be faced with brilliant colors which show only at rare intervals, and even the lower edges of skirts often will reveal that they have been faced with some color and material foreign to their own stuffs. Contrasting materials have been wedded in the making of the modern gowns to the end that they form trimmings by their very combination. There will be a printed silk, to choose the most obvious example, against a plain and dark material the one forming the upper half and the other the lower half of the dress. Then there will be a brilliantly toned silk used with a black or deep blue silk or a tied and dyed fabric used along with something that is dull in tone, the two by reason of their contrast making the dress and its trimming without any thought of additional features. Indeed, this idea has been so universally liked and accepted that it can be seen in many gowns.

Neck and organza and all sorts of lingerie trimmings are important as trimmings for the newer gowns and they take us into the Victorian era by reason of the designs in which they have been made. There are many tiny lace ruffles, from those that wind round and round into ruffles to trim little hats or sweet girl's dresses, to those posed upon dresses in sweeping rows to make the trimming for the whole costume.

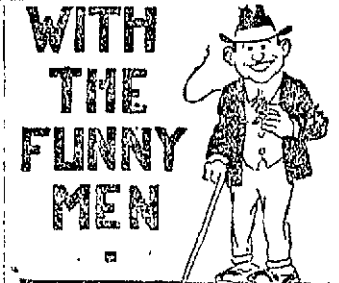

Henry Hudson.

Charles Barnard, an authority on the subject, says that the time and place of the birth of Henry Hudson appear to be lost. "We only know," he says, "that he had earned, perhaps by the time he was forty, sufficient reputation as a bold and skillful navigator to be placed in command of the ship Half Moon of Amsterdam. Early in 1609 he made a contract with a party of Dutch merchants to act as captain of their private exploring expedition, and in the written agreement between them he was described as 'Henry Hudson, Englishman'."

Her Occupation.

Flannery, the young colored cook in the Steadman household, had decided to make a change and try her luck in the capacity of waitress, feeling that she would find the work much easier. Shortly afterward she had occasion to return to the house, and as she was leaving her former mistress asked her where she was working now.

"Oh, I ain't workin' nowhere now, ma'am," quickly returned Flannery, cooly. "I'm goin' for a congressman."

A HAPPY MAN

"Going to move this spring?"
"No."
"Going to decorate the house then?"
"No."
"I presume you're going to build a sleeping porch or something?"
"No."
"Great Scott! Isn't your wife going to do anything unpleasant or uncomfortable this year?"

Mary's Bright Idea.
"It's no wonder you're such a daisy," declared the bad boy. "Your pa and ma were married by a Justice of the Peace."
"Well," retorted independent Mary, "from the noise I hear coming from your house, your pa and ma must have been married by the secretary of war!" —Lathander.

Provoking.
Myrtle—While I was playing whist with Miss Singleton last evening she asked me what the trump was at least six times.
Maude—Were you not provoked?
Myrtle—I should say so! As if I knew!

Scientific Salesmanship.
Manager—Why did that customer walk out without buying?
Saleslady—We didn't have what she wanted.

Manager—You are not supposed to sell them what they want. Sell them what we have.

Evening Things Up.

Howell—Do you believe that woman should smoke?
Powell—Sure things; if give a man a chance to get back at her when Christmas comes, by giving her the same kind of cigars she used to give him.

Tactful Flattery.
Author (with rejected manuscript)—I tried to make the editor see what a good writer I was, but it was no go.
Friend—You were wrong there. You should have told him what a good editor he is.

A SERIOUS MATTER.
Neverwed—The good old mother-in-law joke seems about played out.
Longwed—The real mother-in-law never was a joke except to you guys who were never up against one.

A Possibility.
When you suffer from the asthma, don't let it go at that.
There is a chance you get that way, because you keep a fit.

Didn't Feel the Heat.
Ell—He may be no good, but he certainly has money to burn.
Kat—Well, I never suffered with the heat when I was out with him.—William Purple Cow.

Evidence Against Her.
"Don't you think Alice sings with a great deal of feeling?"
"Can't say that I do. If she had any feeling she would spare her friends."

Willing to Pay.
She—A penny for your thoughts.
Stuyt—I was thinking of going.
Her Father (from head of stairs)—Give him a dollar, Marjorie—it's worth it.

Bathing Enough in Summer.
He—And to think that you have no bath in the house.
She—Well, you see, our circumstances permit us to spend three months at the seaside every year.

Plenty of Suspense.
Chiff—There isn't any suspense about your play.
Playwright—Oh, isn't there? You just ought to see me waiting for the royalties.

Why the Plot?
A Chicago man faints when he saw his wife's new hat. And yet some women insist on using revolvers on their husbands.

Qualified.
Proprietor—Have you had any experience as a waiter?
Applicant—I carried six courses at one time in college.

Daily Dialogue.
Flubb—I never could make a speech.
Dubb—That's too bad.
Flubb—So I always say "Silence is golden."

Talk.
Emilly—Helen and Max talked of nothing but their children's.
Curtis—It must have been a brilliant conversation.

Less Interesting.
If all the people told the truth, as through this world they walk, we would be better, but in truth, we'd miss some brightly talk.

A Martyr.
Wife—So you expect to get into heaven by hanging onto my skirts?
Hub—No, but I might by showing St. Peter the bill for them.

Less Embarrassing.
Wife—It's no use, William; I can read you like a book.
Hub—Then I wish you'd do more reading and less questioning.
